

Sprint Planning Meeting

04/17/2023 3:30pm All members present

Scrum master: Michael Paulsen

Client meeting scheduled - Thursday Apr 27, time TBD (ended up being at 4pm)

The only blocking issues we came up with were being able to consume the shipping API, and making sure the models for Product and Listing would work with our intended functionality. Both of these issues were resolved.

Client meeting

The sprint review meeting for the second sprint took place on Thursday, April 27th, at 4:00pm, and all of the members were present. During the roughly half hour meeting, we discussed the new features and improvements the team had made to the site during the sprint. Overall, the client was extremely pleased with the progress so far, and especially liked the shipping functionality, and the idea of eventual message integration with a service like discord. Her only concerns were regarding minor cosmetic and design implementations (she wanted the color selection blocks on the Add Listing page to be smaller and closer together, for example), but again, we explained that this stage of the site is primarily focused on adding functionality and that the final design would be refined as the project continues.

Team Retrospective Meeting

The team retrospective meeting for the second sprint took place on Thursday, April 27th at 3:15pm, and all of the members were present. During the half hour meeting, we discussed what we'd like to keep doing, stop doing, and start doing as a team to continue to be successful in meeting our goals for this project. As a team, we agreed that we should start breaking the user stories down into smaller, more specific pieces, and have more frequent, if smaller, interactions with the client to check in and make sure we're meeting her expectations. We also agreed that we should keep having frequent standup meetings as well as more detailed meetings at the beginning/end of every sprint. We did not have anything that we decided we should stop doing in this sprint meeting.
